Fred and Barbara Erb were born and raised in the Detroit area where they raised their four children, developed the family business and have focused their philanthropic legacy.

Devoted parents, grandparents and long-time civic leaders, Fred and Barbara’s philanthropy was strongly influenced by their desire to create a better world for current and future generations. This desire, their shared love of the outdoors and their deep sense of fairness and justice led them to view their philanthropy through the lens of sustainability — development that harmonizes economic, environmental and social interests to meet the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Born February 11, 1923 in Detroit, MI, Fred attended Cranbrook School in Bloomfield Hills where he excelled in sports, music, science and math. Fred went on to Cornell University to study engineering. In 1942 he transferred to the University of Michigan where he met his wife Barbara.

With the onset of World War II, Fred joined the Army Enlisted Reserve and was called to active duty in June 1943. While stationed in Maryland he spent his weekends in New York City listening to jazz greats like Art Tatum, Billie Holiday and his favorite, Sidney Bechet, developing what would become a lifelong love of jazz.

After the war, Fred and Barbara married and Fred resumed his education at Michigan. Having decided that he wanted to be an entrepreneur, Fred transferred from engineering to business and earned his BBA degree with honors in 1947. Shortly after graduation, Fred went to work for his uncle’s lumber and coal business in Royal Oak. The day Fred began, he learned his uncle was leaving. He told Fred, “You’re running the company now.” Stunned, Fred took the helm. Starting with seven employees, one store, and sales approaching $170,000 (one third of which was coal), the next year the company’s sales rose to $300,000 and the following year to $1,000,000. By the 1970’s Erb Lumber became the largest lumber supplier in Michigan. When Fred sold the business in 1993, it was a multi-state enterprise covering 45 locations with 1,300 employees and generating $280 million in sales (none of which was coal). Fred was also active in real estate development, often lending money to new builders unable to access traditional financing — a further reflection of his entrepreneurial spirit.

After years of charitable giving, Fred and Barbara made their largest gift ever to create the Frederick A. and Barbara M. Erb Institute for Global Sustainable Enterprise, a joint Master degree program between the University of Michigan Ross School of Business and the School of Natural Resources and Environment. In 2007, as parents and grandparents with a concern for the environment and a love of the arts, Fred and Barbara established the Fred A. and Barbara M. Erb Family Foundation.

Fred died January 10, 2013, just before his 90th birthday, after living 12 years with Alzheimer’s Disease. We are pleased that Fred’s legacy will live on through the work of the Foundation.
Our mission is to nurture environmentally healthy and culturally vibrant communities in metropolitan Detroit and support initiatives to restore the Great Lakes Basin.

Letter From The President

With my father’s passing last January, we have been thinking more than ever about his life and legacy and its importance to the Foundation. A key ingredient to my parents’ success was their belief in people. My father equally valued all Erb Lumber employees — regardless of their position in the company, political views or socio-economic background — recognizing that good ideas come from engaged and appreciated people. Likewise, my mother enjoyed working with a variety of individuals — from donors on arts committees to progressives who shared her passion for recycling and organic gardening before it was popular.

Our Foundation continues this tradition. Sustainability works from the bottom-up and is rooted in the actions and decisions by individuals, nonprofit and profit enterprises, and local communities. We gather our ideas from many places and support organizations of many types — be they community-based, membership-based, policy-oriented, or research-focused. But whatever the organization, its success depends on talented, committed people making a difference — people from diverse backgrounds and points of view. Our Biannual Report features some of those people. The online version of the Report includes short videos of their work. We hope you find their actions inspirational and their ideas replicable.

Speaking of talented and committed people, I am pleased to announce that the Foundation hired Susanna Weckerle as Program Officer effective February 2013. Sue has several years’ experience promoting sustainable development as Program Officer at the Community Foundation for Southeast Michigan and Assistant City Planner for the City of Birmingham. She will help us administer and advance our grants program.

Another significant change is an increase in our endowment. You will notice in the Financial Statements on page 24 that we have begun to transfer the assets from my father’s estate to the Foundation. By this time next year, subject to performance of the financial markets, our endowment will be approximately $250 million. Due to this increase, we are undertaking a strategic planning process to determine the impact of the growth on our funding priorities and practices. We look forward to updating you on the outcomes of that process. Thank you for your continuing interest in our Foundation and the work we support.

John M. Erb, President

Our Desired Outcome is improved water quality in the Great Lakes Basin, especially the watersheds impacting metro Detroit and Bayfield, Ontario. We support efforts to restore ecological integrity in these watersheds with an emphasis on local implementation of regional Great Lakes strategies (primarily green infrastructure) for reducing non-point source pollution such as stormwater runoff.

Progress Highlights
Thanks to the Sierra Club, residents throughout the city of Detroit are beginning to embrace green infrastructure. For example, members of the Stahelin Street Tigers Block Club have installed seven rain gardens and rain barrels. Wayne State University has donated flow meters to measure the amount of water diverted from the sewer system, but residents can already testify to how it has improved their community and helped their children experience a greater connection with nature.

“People are more friendly, they are sitting out on their porches more, they’re talking to one another more. So, yes, it is bringing quality of life back to the community. It may seem just like a small thing to some people but it’s really huge to us.”
— VALERIE BURRIS, STAHELIN STREET TIGERS BLOCK CLUB

Our Desired Outcomes are social equity in environmentally sustainable communities and a reduction in negative environmental impacts on human health.

Progress Highlights

Urban waterways like the Detroit River contain legacy toxins that are stored in the fat of fish feeding there years after the polluting source has been eliminated. Fish consumption advisories have proven largely ineffective with low-income people of color who are more likely to fish for consumption than for sport. Specially trained “riverwalkers,” anglers who also fish for consumption, are helping educate their peers through the Wayne State University Riverwalkers Program.

“Not only do we hand out pamphlets, but we talk to the people ... I have been fishing out there for 60 years. I feel good to come back here and inform people about ... the nice fish to catch and eat and which is not good for the health of their family.”

Our Desired Outcome is a culturally vibrant city of Detroit and metropolitan region. We provide general operating support for cultural and arts organizations, including larger organizations that have historical significance to the Erb family and organizations that are essential for a strong central city and vibrant neighborhoods.

Progress Highlights

The Erb Family Foundation continued to partner with the Kresge Foundation to support Detroit area arts organizations by using a streamlined application and reporting process. Together, the Foundations provided a total of $6.64 million in unrestricted operating support over two years to 67 organizations. Erb awarded $2.4 million to 35 organizations and Kresge awarded $4.24 million to 66 organizations.

“PuppetArt is not just a performing space but also a museum and studio. These three venues intertwine with each other to create one comprehensive program ... so the children, teachers and adults who work with children have enough inspiration, and the basic skills, to embark on their own programs.”

Community Arts

Our Desired Outcome is to strengthen neighborhoods, and ultimately the city of Detroit and metropolitan region, that are strengthened through cultural activities and public art. We support neighborhood-based cultural and arts projects that engage the community in planning, creating and maintaining the project, especially those that explore the intersection of arts and the environment.

Progress Highlights

Community arts provide excellent service learning opportunities. ArtsCorpsDetroit is pairing student volunteers with community organizations to develop neighborhood-based arts projects throughout the city and evaluating the impact on each student’s personal growth.

“When art is around, it changes people’s feelings about what they’re around … art brings that vibrant energy … it makes people change the way they think, how they feel.”

— JASMINE HARRIS, EAST SIDE DETROIT RESIDENT PAINTING MURAL AT MACK AND DICKERSON
Jazz Education

We support advanced jazz instruction for musically talented but economically disadvantaged young people, an investment in Detroit’s strong jazz tradition and a reflection of Fred Erb’s love of jazz.

Progress Highlights

Over 250 youth continued to receive top-notch jazz instruction through one or more of the four programs supported annually by the Foundation — The Carr Center Arts Academy, Detroit International Jazz Festival’s Jazz Infusion Program, Michigan State University’s Community Music School program in Detroit and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra’s Civic Jazz Programs.

“When I was 13, I was in a summer program just like [The Carr Center Arts Academy]. And the musicians that mentored and taught us during these programs are people that have been my lifelong friends and mentors.”

– MARION HEYDON, STRING BASSIST AND JAZZ INSTRUCTOR
The Foundation supports leading research on the prevention, management and treatment of Alzheimer’s disease.

From time to time, the Foundation also initiates support for exceptional opportunities that fall outside of its mission. A recent investment in the Detroit Riverfront was one of those opportunities.

Progress Highlights

During the first three years of a five year, $1 million grant, the Detroit RiverFront Conservancy expanded its environmental and arts programming to include programs such as the Kids Fishing Fest, Rain Barrels on the Riverfront and Artscape. The grant has helped encourage consideration of a rain garden, a pervious parking lot and other green building principles along the Riverfront.

“The environmental programs and public art we have along the Detroit riverfront inspire and engage visitors and helps foster a unique ‘sense of place’ that is leading the waterfront to become a world-class destination.”
